Dear James:

I would like to invite you to participate in a conference designed exclusively for the educational benefit of a bipartisan, bicameral group of senior congressional staff focusing on The Baltics, Ukraine and Russia: Challenges for U.S. Policy in Tallinn, Estonia August 26-31, 2018 (including travel to and from Washington).

We have assembled a group of outstanding scholars from Moscow, Kyiv, Riga, Tallinn, London and Vienna to enhance the discussions. Matthew Rojansky, Director of the Kennan Institute at the Wilson Center, will participate as well.

Attendance is by invitation only, with no outside observers, press, or lobbyists. Funding for this project is provided by grants from the Henry Luce Foundation, the Democracy Fund, and Rockefeller Brothers Fund —no government, individual, foreign, corporate or special interest funds are accepted. Attached is a signed Private Sponsor Travel Certification Form affirming that no lobbyists fund this activity, that the Aspen Institute does not hire or retain lobbyists, and that no lobbyists will be present. Our purpose is education, not advocacy.

Departure will be on Sunday, August 26th and we will return to the U.S. on Friday, August 31st. Should you accept the invitation, it is required that you participate throughout the duration of the conference. Your expenses, including airfare, lodging and meals, will be paid by the Aspen Institute Congressional Program. Under the ethics rules, no expenses are covered for entertainment or recreation.

Additionally, we have luncheon meetings throughout the year for congressional staff with speakers on public policy challenges. We hope you will be able to participate in the extended educational offerings of this series. If you have any questions, please feel free to call Carrie Rowell at 202-736-5825. I hope you will be able to join us for this important conference.

- How does each side perceive the role of “hacking” and “cyber attacks” during the 2016 U.S. election and how does this impact core foreign policy concerns?

THE ROLE OF NATO, OSCE, AND MULTILATERAL INSTITUTIONS IN EURO-ATLANTIC SECURITY.

The vision of the Helsinki Final Act of 1975 and the Charter of Paris of 1990 was a European and Eurasian region united, not divided, by a common and comprehensive understanding of security. That vision seems far away from today's reality. Russians now assert that two decades of NATO enlargement have demonstrated Washington's indifference to their security concerns, while U.S. allies in NATO identify Russia as an acute threat to their security, and point to Russia's “hybrid” and conventional attacks on Ukraine, Georgia, Estonia and other states as proof of Moscow's aggressive intentions. With both Moscow and Washington accusing the other side of violating foundational nuclear arms control treaties, frequent “near miss” incidents in the air and at sea, and increasing concentrations of conventional military forces operating in close proximity to one another in the Baltic, Black Sea and Eastern Mediterranean regions, the risks of escalation are serious with potentially disastrous consequences.

- Why does Russia see NATO enlargement as a threat?
- What is the risk of military conflict between Russia and NATO, and what can be done to reduce that risk?
- What are the prospects for additional negotiated or unilateral nuclear weapons reductions by the U.S. and Russia?
- How does each side think about “stability”? Is a strategically stable relationship between nuclear powers desirable, or even possible?
- Can the OSCE, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, as the legacy institution of the 1975 Helsinki Final Act, play a more significant role in reconciling increasing divergent conceptions of security in the region?
- What would be necessary to restore the “inclusive” and “comprehensive” thinking about Euro-Atlantic and Eurasian security that helped bring the Cold War to a peaceful end?

UKRAINE AND THE BALTICS: LEARNING FROM THREE DECADES OF BALANCING REFORM AND NATIONAL SECURITY

The ongoing conflict in Ukraine's Eastern region costs more lives than any other in the post-Soviet region, and appears to be an effective Russian "veto" over Ukraine's closer cooperation with the West, including with NATO. Moreover, the ongoing conflict complicates debates around domestic problems in Ukraine, where oligarchs still exercise a degree of control over politics, media and the economy reminiscent of the pre-Maidan era, "fake news" is ubiquitous, and nationalist forces peddle simplistic but divisive populism. In contrast, despite serious security challenges, the Baltic region has advanced far ahead of other East European and former Soviet neighbors, achieving impressive domestic political and economic reforms, and joining both NATO and the European Union.

- What is the state of the conflict in Ukraine now?
- What is Russia's motivation for intervening in Ukraine? How does it see U.S. and European involvement there?
- Can the Minsk agreements be salvaged as a framework for managing and resolving the Donbas conflict?
- What is the likelihood of further major Russian interference in the former Soviet space? How vulnerable are other states in the post-Soviet region, such as Moldova, Georgia, or Belarus?
- What are the prospects for the dispute over Crimea? Will this be an indefinite obstacle to productive relations between Ukraine and Russia, and between Russia and the West?

FACTORS DRIVING RUSSIAN PUBLIC OPINION TOWARD THE WEST: SANCTIONS, MEDIA, AND NARRATIVE

Under Western sanctions and formal diplomatic isolation since the outbreak of the Ukraine crisis in 2014, Russia has suffered economic decline exacerbated by low global energy and commodity prices and its own lack of structural reform. At various times, thousands of young Russians have turned out in protest against official corruption, in cities across the country, often prompted by online activism. Yet the Russian economy appears set to grow, albeit slowly, and the re-election of President Vladimir Putin in March sets him on a path to remain in power at least through 2024.

- What is the national mood in Russia today, and what are people's main concerns?
- What is the state of the Russian media, civil society, and independent political activity?
- What is the role of nationalism and the politics of historical memory/mythology in Russian politics?
- Is Russia effectively isolated as a result of Western sanctions? How has it pursued non-Western economic relationships and developed new trading blocs as an alternative?
- Is Russia a state in decline or a rising global power? What are Russia's aspirations regarding its role in the world?
- What is the explanation for Vladimir Putin's continuing high popularity? Is it appropriate to think in terms of the longevity of the "Putin system"?

Educational Day Visit to Narva, on the Russian Border

We will take a day trip to Narva, approximately 120 miles east of Tallinn on the Russian border. Approximately 95 percent of Narva's 60,000 residents speak Russian. Comparisons have been made between eastern Estonia and Crimea as well as Donbas (Eastern Ukraine) due to the superficial similarities that a majority of the population identifies with the Russian language and culture and consumes Russian media. Our meetings in Narva are intended to give participants a basis for assessing whether these comparisons have merit or not.
